Welcome to the University of Granada!

The fact that you have opened this handbook means that you have already considered the University of Granada (UGR) for your study or research period abroad, which fills us with great pride. The UGR is one of Spain's and Europe's top universities, with a long-standing tradition in international higher-education co-operation. It offers one of the largest programmes of undergraduate and postgraduate studies, as well as being particularly active in research and social commitment projects.

This International Student Handbook will give you an insight into our university - a well-established top-quality institution, proud of its history and fully-committed to a brilliant future. You will also gain useful information about the city of Granada and the UGR to help you prepare your stay and academic programme with us.

We look forward to seeing you in Granada!

*Dorothy Kelly,
Vice-Rector for International Relations and Development Cooperation of University of Granada*

The University of Granada:

500 years of history

The founding of the University of Granada was granted by Papal Bull, issued in 1531, establishing a Christian university to follow in the stead of the, until then, Islamic Madrassa, dating from 1349. Indeed, the site of the Arab university is now occupied by the UGR and part of the original construction can still be seen. Since then, the UGR – drawing on its historical roots – has gradually grown and developed into what it has become today: a public higher-education institution that is committed to quality and excellence in the areas of teaching, learning and research. In line with this, the university has, throughout its history, become increasingly active in the transfer of scientific, technical and artistic knowledge, social advancement, sustainable development and, above all, internationalization.

World ranking

Numerous national and international ranking agencies that evaluate higher education teaching and research have placed the UGR among the top universities in Spain, as well as including it within the top 3% of the best higher education institutions worldwide. Indeed, according to the Shanghai ranking, the UGR appears as one of the world's top 500 universities.

Linking Past, Present and Future

The UGR today

Over the past decade or so, the University of Granada has grown in size and stature more than ever before. It is not only one of Spain's top universities, but is also a major actor in the area of higher education both in Europe and Latin America. There are currently seven university campuses, in addition to the "Central Campus", which takes in all the UGR premises spread throughout the city centre of Granada. Two of the campuses are those of Ceuta and Melilla, which are Spanish enclaves located on the coast of northern Africa. The study programmes available at the UGR are among the most extensive in Europe, which helps to explain our high student numbers: around 65,000, of which some 10,000 are international students. The UGR is involved in a wide range of international projects and networks, as well as in innumerable internationally-renowned exchange programmes, thanks to the long list of co-operation partners it has throughout the world.

Internationalization

As a truly cosmopolitan institution, the UGR places great emphasis on actively participating in all initiatives that contribute towards its international dimension. For this reason, one of the UGR's strategic hubs for development and growth is a reinforced internationalization that affects all aspects of the university: study programmes, research, services, students and staff.

Quality

1. The UGR, one of the best universities in Europe, is internationally renowned for quality in all aspects of university life: teaching, research, culture and services.

International experience

2. The UGR is the European HE institution that both sends and receives most students within the LLP/Erasmus Programme. In 2007, our university was awarded the Erasmus Gold Star for this very reason.

3. The UGR has both a long-standing tradition and well-established experience in running and co-ordinating academic and institutional co-operation projects within the framework of international programmes. Our university is currently involved in over 60 international co-operation projects, 16 of which are co-ordinated by the UGR.

4. The UGR is a welcoming cosmopolitan university, where you can continue your studies in an atmosphere of diversity, equality and tolerance. In fact, 10% of UGR students are not of Spanish origin.

A wide range of HE, Academic and Research Programme

5. The UGR offers a wide range of internationally-focused academic programmes, which are quality-controlled and in touch with the times. These include 7 double-degree programmes – 4 of which are international – and joint degrees that are available to over 65,000 UGR students.

6. For 2012/13, you can follow 65 undergraduate courses, covering all areas of knowledge: Experimental Sciences, Health Sciences, Social and Legal Sciences, Technical and Engineering Studies, Humanities, etc. There are also 89 Official Master's Programmes, including: 3 Erasmus Mundus Programmes (one of which is given totally in English); 7 Official Bilingual Master's Programmes (Spanish-English); 3 Master's Programmes taught in English; 35 Doctoral Programmes; 166 UGR Programmes; over 35 summer courses and more than 133 online courses.

7. If you successfully finish any of our academic programmes, you will be ensured of excellent job possibilities, since UGR graduates are highly considered on the job market.

15 Reasons for studying at the UGR

8. As a UGR student, you can also take classes in Spanish and/or other foreign languages. You'll be part of the 10,000-plus students that register every year for the language courses offered by the UGR's Centro de Lenguas Modernas. The UGR is also privileged to have agreements with the Confucius Institute, the Al-babtain Chair in Arabic Studies and the Russkij Mir Institute, offering courses in Chinese, Arabic and Russian, respectively.

9. The UGR is internationally renowned for the excellence of its research projects in many fields. Over 400 research groups work in all fields of scientific knowledge, in collaboration with other national and international teams, all of which are leaders in their particular area. Thus, the UGR is at the forefront of research in a whole range of fields.

Quality services

10. The UGR provides quality in all the services it offers to all members of the university community: accommodation, library network, refectories, assistance for the disabled, centre for learning problems, sports and student services, to name but a few.

University, city and surroundings

11. The UGR and the city of Granada are as one. The university's campuses and centres – along with over 65,000 students – are located throughout the city, giving Granada a unique student atmosphere.

12. Granada, a safe modern city, has the added advantage of its location, half-way between the sea and the mountains. The Mediterranean coast – with a subtropical climate – is a 40-minute drive away, and visiting the Sierra Nevada Ski Resort will only take you 30 mins. by car.

Granada will enchant you...

13. Granada is famous for many reasons: history, culture, monuments and its university. The city's natural charm, along with all the cultural and recreational activities on offer, make it a great place to study and to discover its enchantment.

Out and about in Granada – Cost of living

14. The city is full of culture: there are annual festivals covering flamenco, jazz, tango, theatre, magic, music, dance, comics, cinema, poetry, etc. Spanish cuisine is internationally renowned for its quality and variety. On top of this, Granada is well-known for its tapas, as well as being one of the cheapest cities, both in Spain and Europe, to live as a student.

Solidarity and the environment

15. One of the pillars on which the UGR is based is that of solidarity and commitment to the environment. The Centre for University Development Co-operation (CICODE) provides access for students to participate in programmes aimed at development co-operation and training in areas concerning the less-developed communities around our planet.

Mi estancia en la UGR ha sido una experiencia muy positiva. Recomiendo la UGR tanto por la calidad de su oferta académica como por hallarse en una de las ciudades más bonitas del mundo

Valentino Addari (Italia)

A day at the UGR

Attend classes at one of the UGR's 7 campuses (5 in the city itself, plus two more, in the Autonomous Cities of Ceuta and Melilla). You'll be asked to prepare seminars and reports for your continuous evaluation at the UGR. You'll be using the UGR's excellent laboratories and forming part of research groups. There's a whole network of libraries available, some of which offer round-the-clock study facilities during mid-term and final exam periods. Learn other languages via the UGR's Centro de Lenguas Modernas, the Confucius Institute or the Russkij Mir Centre. The university's cultural centre, Casa de Porras, gives students the chance to follow cultural activities alongside their academic study programme. After class, you can meet up with your classmates to have lunch or dinner at one of the UGR's refectories. Every student has his/her own needs, and the UGR tries to cover them via its accommodation service, offering everything from places in university halls of residence to student flats around the city. All UGR premises and surrounding grounds provide free WiFi access so that students can connect to the university website or their personal accounts. Want to ski, swim, play tennis...? The UGR's sports service can give you this, and more. As a registered UGR student, you can apply for volunteer activities. If you like music or acting, why not apply to join the UGR's orchestra or theatre groups? Make the most of all these things. They're there for you!

Education that provides both innovation and quality

The UGR offers a wide range of quality-assessed under-graduate and post-graduate programmes in virtually all fields of study, some of which are given bilingually (Spanish-English) or solely in English. Some 70,000 students have chosen the UGR as their centre of higher education. There are close to 70 undergraduate programmes, over 90 Master's courses and 35 PhD study programmes.

At the forefront of research

International Campus of Excellence (ICE)

<http://biotic.ugr.es>

This is a project based on 4 major strategic areas in which the UGR is a major player at an international level: Bio-Health; Information and Communication Technologies; Earth Systems; Heritage and Culture. The project itself is a strategic alliance formed by the University of Granada, the Higher Council for Scientific Research and the Health-Science Technology Park.

Office for Research Transfer (OTRI)

<http://otri.ugr.es>

Promoting interaction/collaboration between the UGR's R+D+I projects and the private sector. The OTRI promotes and helps establish links for the production, transfer and implementation of research project results. The UGR is also increasingly more involved in the international dissemination of its research findings. One of our university's main goals is to become ever more in touch with international markets and countries around the world.

For students, the OTRI promotes an enterprising culture, helping you to develop your own projects, as well as widening your professional outlook, using the scientific and technical knowledge obtained both within and outside an academic environment.

Research Institutes

http://www.ugr.es/pages/institutos\_centros

The global increase in the publication of scientific research results means that the UGR has become one of the top European universities, with over 400 research groups investigating in all fields of knowledge.

Scientific Instrumentation Centre (SIC)

<http://cic.ugr.es>

Houses the main equipment needed for research in such areas as bio-medicine, chemistry or materials. Some of its installations or instruments are unique, such as the cell-line bank or the ionic microsound – the only one in southern Europe, which allows the dating of micrometric pieces of rock or minerals with great precision.

Health-Sciences Technology Park (HTP)

<http://www.ptsgranada.com>

The HTP Granada has grown into the first technology park in Spain, and one of the few in the world, specialising in health. It is a unique project that, backed by the UGR, provides an optimum environment for the creation, implementation and expansion of teaching, research and healthcare centres, as well as for technological and services companies. New bio-health faculties, centres of research excellence, an internationally-renowned university hospital and over 60 firms currently form what the HTP is today.

UGR-Corporate Sector General Foundation

<http://fundacionugrempresa.es/>

This is a privately-managed not-for-profit body, created to encourage and develop co-operation between the UGR and the firms and organisations – both private and public – in areas of R+D+I, training, promoting business initiatives and employment.

University Life

The UGR has state-of-the-art premises, numerous student resources and top-quality services

UGR-wide Wi-Fi Online Access, which gives you free access to the UGR's computer network from any of the university's campuses or premises.

UGR-wide Library Service, available at all university centres, where you can access services such as: loan of documents and laptops, information, computer access to different bibliographic and document services, access to the UGR Wi-Fi network, reproduction and consultation of documents, as well as electronic access to thousands of highly prestigious international journals and databases. <http://biblioteca.ugr.es>

The Sports Activities Centre offers you the opportunity to practise all kinds of sports activities: athletics, swimming, mountain climbing, skiing, hill walking, cycling, canoeing, etc. It also boasts top-quality sports facilities and organises all kinds of courses and sports competitions throughout the academic year.

International Student Associations. There are a number of these associations, whose job is to help with the integration of students of any nationality, through trips, exchanges, cultural events and many activities more. <http://www.esngranada.org> - <http://wdb.ugr.es/~aegee/cms/>

Other learning resources

International School for Postgraduate Studies

<http://escuelaposgrado.ugr.es>

If you're thinking of following postgraduate studies at our university, here you can receive an advanced training, allowing you to specialize academically or professionally. You can also begin a career in research.

E-Learning Centre (CEVUG)

<http://cevug.ugr.es>

In order to complete your academic training, this centre offers a wide range of online services: academic subjects, complementary courses and Master's courses, partially or fully online. Furthermore, you can take part in international projects, among which are those supporting the physical mobility of Erasmus students (<http://www.mobi-blog.eu>) or virtual mobility (<http://www.movinter.eu>).

Modern Languages Centre (CLM)

<http://www.cml-granada.es>

If, once in Granada, you wish to study languages, you may be interested in the courses offered by the UGR's Modern Languages Centre: Spanish courses for foreigners (Hispanic Studies Course, Spanish Language and Culture Course, Intensive Spanish Language Courses and Intensive Spanish Language and Culture Courses) or courses in foreign languages (English, French, Italian, German, Arabic, Chinese, Modern Greek, Japanese, Dutch, Portuguese, Russian and Swedish).

Confucius Institute

<http://institutoconfucio.ugr.es>

This is one of three such centres existing in Spain and its main objective is to promote the study of Chinese language and culture, as well as developing those related activities, through language and culture courses at different levels, film nights, seminars, conferences, workshops, etc.

UGR Summer School (Centro Mediterráneo)

<http://www.ugr.es/local/cm>

This centre organises an extensive range of summer courses covering all disciplines and subject areas, which are taught in a number of locations (Almuñécar, Granada, Guadix and Sierra Nevada).

Permanent Open Education Centre

<http://www.ugr.es/local/aulaperm>

This is a UGR initiative put in place to cover the educational demands of the over-50s, allowed to enrol at the UGR with no other requisite than that of having turned 50.

Granada es la mejor ciudad para los estudiantes, tanto a nivel académico como social.

Estoy muy satisfecha, esta ciudad ofrece a diario muchas actividades, conciertos, festivales...

Granada, a privileged enclave

One of the city of Granada's outstanding features is as a tourist destination, which makes it ideal not only for studying, but also for tourism. Located in eastern Andalusia, in southern Spain, the city has one of the greatest cultural heritages in the country. In addition to the world-famous Alhambra and the Arab quarter of the Albayzin (both of which have World Heritage status from the UNESCO), Granada also has a Renaissance cathedral, dating back to the 16th century. Many other historic monuments are dotted around the city.

Another of Granada's defining characteristics is as a "University City", which turns it into a vibrant place. Likewise, Granada is a safe modern city, located in privileged surroundings: only 60 km from the tropical climate of the Mediterranean coast and at the foot of the Sierra Nevada, a mountain range that rises up to 3,400 m above sea level and which is home to the southernmost ski resort in Europe.

Get to know Granada Province

Here's the official tourism website for Granada Province: <http://www.turgranada.es>

The 13,000 square kilometres of the province of Granada contain an amazing number and variety of tourist attractions. At any time of the year, visitors can choose from a multitude of ways in which to fill their leisure time: visiting historic and artistic monuments, spending the night at the small hotels in the many villages dotted along the byways and tracks that form a rural tourism network spanning the hills and mountains, skiing or taking part in the other sports on offer at the ski resort, as well as other open-air activities, or just relaxing on the beach down by the coast.

For those who prefer the peace of the countryside to the bustle of city life, there are six nature reserves, including the Sierra Nevada National Park. The foothills to the south of the Sierra Nevada, known as the Alpujarras, are speckled with villages dating back to the Middle Ages. With its dramatic scenery, benign climate and complete peace and quiet, visitors often find it difficult to leave. Further inland, the area of the Marquesado and the high meseta provide landscapes in stark contrast to those of the Alpujarras. And in the westernmost parts of the province there are still many interesting ruins from the times of the Muslim kingdom and its fortresses, when this was the frontier between Granada and the historically Christian provinces further west.

Free time and tourist information

The city of Granada has an extensive cultural agenda, open to its most important guests: its university students

After centuries of cultural importance, Granada still has an enviable agenda of cultural and free-time activities. Film, music or theatre programmes and festivals are organised alongside permanent and temporary exhibitions that cover all fields of knowledge. Ancient Renaissance palaces house seminars, conferences and talks, while the most innovative infrastructures can be used for major events. There are three auditoria that run year-round programmes of theatre, opera, concerts, flamenco, etc. and the prestigious Granada City Orchestra has a calendar of concerts in the Manuel de Falla auditorium.

The International Jazz Festival (October), the International Festival of Magic (November), the International Festival of Music and Dance (June/July), the International Film Festival (June), the International Tango Festival (March), the International Week of Organ Music (October and December), the International Show of Comics (Feb./March), the International Festival of Young Film-makers (April) and the Festival of Film Classics (January) are just some examples of this cultural activity that goes on throughout Granada the whole year round.

Granada es una ciudad abierta, muy económica y segura. Gracias a la multitud de estudiantes que viven aquí la vida es muy divertida.

Cost of living in Granada

The city of Granada is considered one of the cheapest cities to live as a student both in Spain and Europe. Evidently, the cost of living will depend on each student's lifestyle, but it will range from €550 to €650 a month.

As a guide, here are some estimations of the cost of living for some basic necessities:

- Living in a shared apartment (bills included) can range from €200 to €250 per person per month.
- Eating a full meal at the university refectory costs €3,50 if you have it there and €4 if you use their take-away service.
- A single-journey bus ticket costs €1,20 and €0,50 if you use the student bus-card.
