

Police the Public, or Protect It?
Police Violence and Racism in America und Germany

1 July 2020 at 18:00 (CEST)

Prof. George Andreopoulos and Prof. Marie-Michelle Strah - The Center for International Human Rights, John Jay College of Criminal Justice, City University New York (CUNY), New York (<http://www.jjay.cuny.edu/center-international-human-rights>).

In the 11 June 2020 issue of the New York Times, Amanda Taub stated that „The American police face a crisis of legitimacy. And its consequences reach far beyond policing itself. Those intent on remaking law enforcement to redress decades of racial injustice would do well to look at the experiences of other countries that have wrestled with just that challenge.”

Together with Prof. George Andreopoulos and Prof. Marie Michelle Strah from the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, City University New York , we are going to discuss racism and violence in the American police and the situation in Germany.

The dial-in via the City University New York.

The dial-in data for this event will be announced shortly (in class or at individual registration, Prof. Drenkhahn).

We are looking forward to lively participation and discussion!
