

Code of Conduct

The Master of European and International Business, Competition and Regulatory Law (MBL-FU) is an international postgraduate program. The diversity of its student body, and the corresponding cultural plurality are an essential and much valued part of the MBL-FU. This Code of Conduct establishes common rules of conduct for MBL-FU's students, faculty, lecturers and staff. The objective is to create a trusting, constructive, appreciative, and safe teaching and learning environment.

Respect

We value the uniqueness and individuality of every single person. We firmly reject any form of discrimination, be it based on gender, age, religious affiliation, origin, ethnicity, sexual orientation, physical or mental impairment, ideology, or social background.

We treat each other with respect and commitment. We are punctual, comply with arrangements and ensure that teaching and learning can take place without disruptions.

Sexual Harassment, Discrimination, and Violence

We strive to provide a safe and supportive learning environment for all students. We do not tolerate sexual harassment, discrimination, and violence. The university's regulations can be found here¹.

We encourage those affected by sexual harassment, discrimination, and violence to report incidents, seek help, and submit complaints. Those who witness or become aware of such incidents are encouraged to offer help to anyone affected. Whoever reports an incident or makes it known otherwise will not suffer any disadvantages and has the right to remain anonymous.

Responsibility

We use the university's resources responsibly, and treat them with care.

We comply with the rules of good academic practice. We make proper use of academic references and do not commit plagiarism.

We respect freedom of expression, and protect the right to privacy. We are aware of our responsibility in handling personal data.

Communication

Our interactions are guided by respect and mutual appreciation—irrespective of status and group affiliation. We maintain an open, friendly and tolerant atmosphere. Conflicts are resolved objectively and constructively.
